Generic Marking Principles

These general marking principles must be applied by all examiners when marking candidate answers. They should be applied alongside the specific content of the mark scheme or generic level descriptors for a question. Each question paper and mark scheme will also comply with these marking principles.

What can you learn about how people traveled west? Explain your answer using details from the source and your knowledge.

Level 4 (6 marks)
Answers that demonstrate a developed understanding of the source content/message, with good supporting contextual knowledge.

- People traveled together (many wagons in a circle), so they were well organized/to defend themselves against Native Americans and wild animals.
- People took their livestock with them (cattle heading to water) because they would be essential for farm work further west.
- People set off on the Oregon Trail from the town of Independence in Missouri.

Level 3 (4–5 marks)
Answers that develop the content/message of the source and demonstrate good understanding; may include some contextual knowledge.

- People traveled together (many wagons in a circle), so they were well organized.
- Many people had used the trail (hundreds scratched their names in the Rock), so it was well established.

Level 2 (2–3 marks)
Answers that select/describe details from the source with some supported development.

- People traveled together.
- People took their livestock with them.

Level 1 (1 mark)
Answers that offer a generalized comment with loose reference to the source.

- People used the Oregon Trail to travel west.

Level 0 (0 marks)
No valid response.
2  Study Source B.

How useful is this source to a historian studying the dangers facing travelers on the Oregon Trail? Explain your answer using details from the source and your knowledge.

Level 4 (7 marks)
Answers that consider the utility and limitations of the source by providing a reasoned and balanced evaluation in terms of its content and provenance.

- The account provides an example of the dangers facing travelers along the Oregon Trail—possible attacks by Native Americans and the importance of being protected through Snake River country by the US Army.
- The account is an isolated event and does not provide the full picture—many groups did make the journey with little or no incident.
- It is an eye-witness account that was published in a newspaper in 1860; it is critical of the role of the US Army.
- It may be biased and it only provides one side to the story.
- It is limited as it is biased—critical of the US army; it only provides one side of the story.

Level 3 (5–6 marks)
Answers that consider the utility and limitations of the source in terms of its content and provenance.

- The account mentions an attack 50 miles south of Salmon Falls and further attacks.
- It refers to the failure of the US Army dragoons to protect the party.
- It provides a date, September 9, but it does not give the year.
- It is written by a person who was in the party and survived the experience; the person is biased in their view.
- The source only comments about the hardships and does not refer to those who completed the Oregon Trail with minor/no setbacks.

Level 2 (2–4 marks)
Answers that consider the utility or limitations of the source in terms of its content and/or provenance.

- The account mentions many dangers facing travelers.
- It describes the effects of attacks by tribes of Native Americans.
- The source was written by a person who was in the party.

Level 1 (1 mark)
Answers that offer a generalized comment or paraphrase the source content.

- The party was attacked by Native Americans.

Level 4 (7 marks)Answers that demonstrate a supported judgment based on an evaluation of the reliability of the source in terms of its content, provenance and contextual knowledge.
- The source describes a common scene—Independence was the starting off point for many wagon trains heading west; wagon trains were becoming increasingly common and some were very large.
- The origin of the source is “The Expositor” newspaper; it is the local newspaper for Independence and will project a positive image; the town exists because of the trails west.
- The account shows that people traveled together in groups; it included families (ref. to women and children) migrating to start a new life out west.
- The account tends to glorify the journey west, presenting a rosy picture; it projects a happy atmosphere.
- The source is reliable to an extent—it provides useful eye-witness testimony of migration west in the 1840s but it might be exaggerated in the way it is written.
Level 3 (5–6 marks)Answers that consider the reliability of the source in terms of its content, provenance and contextual knowledge.
- The source provides information on how the wagon trains were made up—many wagons; families traveling together; taking animals with them.
- The source provides reliable information of how the wagon trains were organized—each wagon pulled by six or eight oxen; over 2000 people in each wagon train and hundreds of animals.
- The source is an eye-witness account of what took place at Independence; it is dated 1845 when the Oregon Trail was becoming established as a suitable route west; it projects a very positive impression of the migration west.
Level 2 (2–4 marks)Answers that consider the reliability of the source in terms of its content and/or provenance.

Question 4

Study Sources D and E.

Why do these sources differ in their accounts of the Donner Party? Explain your answer using details from the source and your knowledge.

Level 5 (9–10 marks)

Answers which explain points of difference based on source content, provenance and good contextual knowledge.

- Sources D and E present contrasting accounts of the experiences of the Donner Party—one from the beginning of the journey and the other recounting the end of the journey.
- Source D was written early in the journey when the party had experienced no real hardships and they had great hope of succeeding.
- Source E recounts the search made by Edwin Bryant to find out why the Donner Party had not reached California; he found the remains of the party and later published his journal (1848) providing evidence of cannibalism; the party had become trapped in the Sierra Nevada due to bad weather.
- Source E is a later reflection published in 1848, while Source D is a letter written in June 1846 before bad weather set in.

Level 4 (7–8 marks)

Answers explain points of difference based on source content and provenance with some contextual knowledge.

- Source D talks about how life on the trail was good, the traveling was along established roads, and they had plenty of food.
- Source E tells the opposite story; the party had been unable to continue their journey; they had run out of food; the bodies showed signs of famine; there were bones around the cabin.
- Both sources were written by eye witnesses to the events; Edwin Bryant had gone on ahead and survived and later returned to look for any survivors; the other was a letter written by Tamsen Donner who had not survived.

Level 3 (5–6 marks)

Answers identify points of difference based on source content and provenance.

- Source D talks about how life on the trail was good, the traveling was easy, and they had plenty of food.
- Source E tells the opposite story; the party had been unable to continue their journey and they had run out of food.
- Both sources were written by eye witnesses to the events.
- Both provide primary evidence about experiences on the Oregon Trail.

Level 2 (3–4 marks)

Answers identify points of difference based on source content or provenance.

- Source D describes how things were going well for the party.
- Source E describes how things had turned out badly for the party.
- Both sources were written by people who had traveled with the Donner Party.

“Life on the Oregon Trail was always hard.” To what extent do you agree? Explain your answer using details from Sources A–G and your knowledge.

Level 6 (15 marks)
Balanced two-sided response based on detailed source content, contextual knowledge and evaluation, with a supported and developed overall judgment.

- Sophisticated analysis of source content from both sides of the argument
  Yes = Sources A, B, E, G
  No = Sources A, C, D, F.
- Supporting knowledge to expand upon source content.
- Evaluation of authorship—detects bias and reasons for it.
- Formulates a reasoned conclusion—the experience of the journey was dependent upon many factors such as the weather; time of year setting out from Independence; meeting with hostile Native American tribes; shortages of food; the sources reflect views from both sides of the argument.

Level 5 (12–14 marks)
Balanced two-sided response supporting and rejecting the statement based on good source content, contextual knowledge and evaluation, with a supported overall judgment.

- More developed discussion of L4 content, knowledge and evaluation.
- Formulates a conclusion—the information given in the sources can be biased and therefore the overall view will be dependent on which sources have been viewed.

Level 4 (9–11 marks)
Two-sided response supporting and rejecting the statement based on source content with either contextual knowledge or evaluation.

- The sources offer a mixed set of viewpoints.
- Some of the sources confirm that life was hard and the travelers had to face many obstacles; attacks made on them in Snake River country by Native Americans (B); the Donner Party getting trapped in the Sierra Nevada during the winter (E).
- Some sources comment on the positives; good weather, a well-worn route, grazing land for animals during the early part of the journey after leaving Independence (D); Oregon Fever caused people to pull together with community spirit prior to leaving Independence (C); romantic image of trail (F).
- Many of the sources offer biased viewpoints such as (B) written by Utter-Van Ornum who had experienced an attack; a local newspaper based in Independence (C), and a very romantic painting of travelers on the Oregon Trail (F).

Depth Study B: The Women’s Suffrage Movement 1866–1920

Question 6

What is the message of this source? Explain your answer using details from the source and your knowledge.

| Level 4 (6 marks) | The source comes from a leaflet “Household Hints” issued by the Women’s Anti-Suffrage Association of Massachusetts—they believed in the traditional view of the roles of men and women. |
| Level 3 (4–5 marks) | The vote would not make any difference to the role of women (ballot not needed to clean the sink). Women should concentrate their efforts on looking after the home and domestic duties rather than campaigning to get the vote. |
| Level 2 (2–3 marks) | Women’s position was in the home (to cook, clean, and look after the husband and their children). The source believes in the traditional role of women—housewives and good mothers. |
| Level 1 (1 mark) | It tells women how to run their household. |

<td>Study Source B. How accurately does this source reflect the views of women toward the women's suffrage movement? Explain your answer using details from the source and your knowledge.</td>
<td>7</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Level 4 (7 marks)
Answers that demonstrate a supported judgment based on an evaluation of the reliability of the source in terms of its content, provenance and contextual knowledge.

- The source presents a one-sided viewpoint; it concentrates on the reasons why women should not have the vote and does not refer to the arguments used by those women campaigning for the vote.
- The source therefore does not accurately reflect the views of women toward the women's suffrage movement—only a section of a female population.
- The fact that the letter appeared in “The New York Times” in 1915 illustrates how important the campaign for women’s suffrage was becoming, especially in New York and other cities; it was a popular news story.

Level 3 (5–6 marks)
Answers that consider the reliability of the source in terms of its content, provenance and contextual knowledge.

- The source provides information on opposition groups who were against women’s suffrage; this group believes men and women have different roles and responsibilities in life; politics should be left to men.
- The source is a letter written by the leader of the Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage in 1915; it is biased and illustrates the arguments used by the anti-suffrage campaign; it was published in “The New York Times” when the arguments over women’s suffrage were becoming more vocal.

Level 2 (2–4 marks)
Answers that consider the reliability of the source in terms of its content and/or provenance.

- The source provides information on how some women set up an opposition group to oppose the campaign for women’s suffrage; this group believes men and women have different roles and responsibilities in life.
- The source is an extract from a letter written by the leader of the Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage in 1915; it is biased in its viewpoint.

Level 1 (1 mark)
Answers that offer a generalized comment or paraphrase the source content.

- Opposition to the women’s suffrage movement was present in 1915.
- Some women did not want the vote to be given to females.

Level 0 (0 marks)

8 | Study Source C.

How useful is this source to a historian studying methods used by the women's suffrage movement? Explain your answer using details from the source and your knowledge.

Level 4 (7 marks)
Answers that consider the utility and limitations of the source by providing a reasoned and balanced evaluation in terms of its content and provenance.

- The source provides an example of one of the methods used by women's suffrage groups in their campaign to obtain the right to vote—marches/processions.
- It displays only one method and provides no information on the other methods used—petitioning, speeches, use of the press, lobbying of politicians.
- It is a biased source that projects a very positive image; it only projects one side of the campaign over women's suffrage.

Level 3 (5–6 marks)
Answers that consider the utility and limitations of the source in terms of its content and provenance.

- The source presents this procession in Washington in March 1913 as an important event—the women are dressed as heralds proclaiming their cause.
- It is the official leaflet produced by a group who campaigned for votes for women so it is not a balanced view.
- The source has its limitations—it is biased in the way it portrays the event as a splendid/important occasion; it does not tell us about other methods used by women in their campaign.

Level 2 (2–4 marks)
Answers that consider the utility or limitations of the source in terms of its content and/or provenance.

- The source shows a march organized by the Women's Suffrage Movement in Washington in March 1913.
- The picture is part of the cover of the program for the march.
- It is useful as it shows that marching was a method used by women in their campaign to gain the vote.

Level 1 (1 mark)
Answer that offer a generalized comment or paraphrase the source content.

- It shows a march organized by women's suffrage groups in March 1913.

Level 0 (0 marks)

Study Sources D and E.

To what extent do Sources D and E agree about the involvement of working-class women in the women's suffrage movement? Explain your answer using details from the source and your knowledge.

Level 5 (9–10 marks)
Answers which explain points of similarity based on source content, provenance and good contextual knowledge.

- Sources D and E present contrasting accounts of the importance of working-class women to the suffrage movement—one representing the viewpoint of someone who wanted the involvement of all classes and the other from a narrow middle-class viewpoint.
- Source D was published in the “Women’s Journal and Suffrage News” in June 1911, a magazine read by women who wanted to obtain the vote.
- Source E was the account of a female trade union delegate who attended a suffrage meeting in 1913 and felt out of place as the convention was dominated by middle-class women who adopted a biased standpoint.
- The two sources therefore illustrate contrasting viewpoints toward working-class women within the suffrage movement but agree that the suffrage movement was dominated by middle-class women.

Level 4 (7–8 marks)
Answers explain points of similarity based on source content and provenance with some contextual knowledge.

- Source D talks about the importance of getting working-class women involved in the suffrage movement.
- Source E talks about the failure of the movement to consult with its working class members; the movement is run by middle-class women.
- Both sources represent the views of women; Miss Ashley (Source D) is a wealthy city attorney and a socialist who values the views of her working-class colleagues; Margaret Hinchley (Source E) is a working-class trade union activist who felt out of place in the convention dominated by middle-class women who ignored her views.

Level 3 (5–6 marks)
Answers identify points of similarity based on source content and provenance.

- Source D says that it is important to get working-class women to join the movement to make it more powerful.
- Source E says that the movement does not really care about the views of working class women; it is a movement dominated by middle-class women.
- Both sources represent the views of women involved in the suffrage campaign; they provide differing viewpoints on the involvement of working-class women in the movement.

Study all the sources.

“The women’s suffrage movement did not unite women behind their cause.” To what extent do you agree? Explain your answer using details from Sources A–G and your knowledge.

Level 6 (15 marks)
Balanced two-sided response based on detailed source content, contextual knowledge and evaluation, with a well-supported and developed overall judgment.

- Sophisticated analysis of source content from both sides of the argument
  Yes = A, B, D, E
  No = C, D, F, G.
- Supporting knowledge to expand on source content.
- Evaluation of authorship—detects bias and the reasons for it.
- Formulates a reasoned conclusion—the movement had its supporters and its opponents among women of all classes; there was more support for the cause at particular times and in particular regions (Western states); for much of the period it was a movement dominated by middle-class activists who struggled to engage the working class to take up the cause.

Level 5 (12–14 marks)
Balanced two-sided response supporting and rejecting the statement based on good source content, contextual knowledge and evaluation, with a supported overall judgment.

- More developed discussion of L4 content, knowledge and evaluation.
- Formulates a conclusion—the information given in the sources can be biased and therefore the overall view will be dependent upon which sources have been viewed.

Level 4 (9–11 marks)
Two-sided response supporting and rejecting the statement based on source content with either contextual knowledge or evaluation.

- The sources offer a mixed set of viewpoints.
- Some of the sources confirm that the suffrage movement was not united in its cause; some represent anti-suffrage views such as (B), which commented that men and women have different roles in society; (A) upholds the traditional role of women as housewives and mothers who look after the domestic issues; the movement is dominated by middle-class women who are not really interested in the views of working-class women (E).
- Congressional Union split from NAWSA in 1913; NAWSA dominated by middle-class women.
- Some sources suggest that there was more widespread support for the suffrage cause; women went on marches to the capital (C); they petitioned Congress (F); recognition by middle class of importance of the working class and the need to involve them (D); progress had been made in 12 states by 1914 and women from all social backgrounds had united behind a common cause (G).

Level 4 (7 marks)
Answers that consider the utility and limitations of the source by providing a reasoned and balanced evaluation in terms of its content and provenance.

- As president since 1893 Cleveland was well informed about the revolt in Cuba and the response in the United States.
- As retiring president the speech was an opportunity to outline his views on the Cuban crisis for the politicians, public, and new president.
- The tone is matter of fact but suggests that considerations of humanity will put pressure on the United States to consider intervention to help the Cuban rebels.
- The source is therefore useful as it is the view of the president, who possessed good intelligence about what was going on in Cuba.
- A limitation is that the speech represents the “official view” the president wants to project; it is a biased viewpoint.

Level 3 (5–6 marks)
Answers that consider the utility and limitations of the source in terms of its content and provenance.

- The impact of the Yellow Press.
- Activities of Cuban exiles in organizing meetings, pressing politicians.
- Details about actual involvement of US citizens in Cuba.
- Popular support was such that some Americans fought for the rebels and demands were made that the United States intervene.
- The US President is attempting to sum up the situation in Cuba and is saying that US involvement might be necessary.
- The president will put forward his view which will be biased which impacts upon usefulness.

Level 2 (2–4 marks)
Answers that consider the utility or limitations of the source in terms of its content and/or provenance.

- The Cuban cause was discussed in the press and public meetings.
- Cubans living in the United States raised funds to buy arms to send to Cuba.
- Encouragement from Americans to help those wishing for a freer government.
- This was a speech made by President Cleveland to the US Congress.

How accurately does this cartoon portray political opinions about US intervention in Cuba? Explain your answer using details from the source and your knowledge.

Level 4 (7 marks)
Answers that demonstrate a supported judgment based on an evaluation of the reliability of the source in terms of its content, provenance and contextual knowledge.

- Popular press was inclined to favor war and to inflame opinion.
- Provides a fair reflection of McKinley’s position.
- Misleading impression that all politicians favored war (Democrats and others were more cautious than Republicans).
- The source has only limited reliability—it was published in a newspaper to highlight the political tensions surrounding the Cuban problem.
- Cartoons exaggerate the situation—it suggests that war will be the outcome of the pending explosion.

Level 3 (5–6 marks)
Answers that consider the reliability of the source in terms of its content, provenance and contextual knowledge.

- Impact of vocal individual congressmen such as Henry Cabot Lodge.
- Republican Party favored intervention.
- McKinley preferred to stay out of the war.
- The cartoon shows the political tension that existed in the US Congress over events in Cuba; the cartoonist is attempting to highlight the seriousness of the debate; it exaggerates the tension.
- The cartoon appeared in the “Minneapolis Tribune” following a key debate in the Senate in March 1898 about US policy toward Cuba.

Level 2 (2–4 marks)
Answers that consider the reliability of the source in terms of its content and/or provenance.

- The politicians in Congress wanted war (clouds of steam).
- Reed and McKinley are struggling to contain the steam (details).
- The caption indicates that the pressure from the politicians is building and the president will have to find a way to defuse the pressure.
- The cartoon appeared in the “Minneapolis Tribune” newspaper.

Why do these sources differ in their accounts of the sinking of the USS Maine? Explain your answer using details from the sources and your knowledge.
Level 5 (9–10 marks)
Answers which explain points of difference based on source content, provenance and good contextual knowledge.
• Both sources are contemporary to the event; both are newspaper reports; they appeared in investigative New York newspapers; both reported the story on February 17, 1898; both put forward theories about how the USS Maine came to sink.
• The sources provide contrasting theories on how the USS Maine came to sink.
• Source D is from “The New York Times” and concludes that there is little evidence but to conclude that the sinking was an accident; it discounts the idea that it was a deliberate sinking.
• Source E has a dramatic headline concluding that that sinking was “the work of an enemy”; it was a deliberate sinking and that view is held by an Assistant Secretary of the Navy—Theodore Roosevelt; the paper offers a reward for information on those involved.
• The accounts differ because newspapers have different audiences and they attempt to portray different interpretations in order to sell their papers.
• Provides own knowledge of the event—details about the explosion; denials of the Spanish; response of US politicians.
Level 4 (7–8 marks)
Answers explain points of difference based on source content and provenance with some contextual knowledge.
• Both sources report on the sinking of the USS Maine and both were printed in New York newspapers on the same day.
• They offer contrasting reasons for the sinking of the USS Maine.
• Source D makes the point that it was an accident and there is no evidence to suggest Spanish or Cuban involvement; it says that the ship's ammunition exploded.
• Source E believes the sinking was deliberate and was an act of sabotage by the Spanish; this was the view held by some US politicians.
• Source D has a bland heading whereas Source E has a dramatic headline “the work of an enemy”.
• Newspapers often cover stories differently.
• Some knowledge provided—denials of Spanish; reaction of US politicians.

“The United States government intervened in Cuba to satisfy public opinion.” To what extent do you agree? Explain your answer using details from Sources A–G and your knowledge.

Level 6 (15 marks)
Balanced two-sided response based on detailed source content, contextual knowledge and evaluation, with a well-supported and developed overall judgment.

- Sophisticated analysis of source content from both sides of the argument
  Yes = B, C, E, G
  No = A, C, D, E, F.
- Supporting knowledge to expand on source content.
- Evaluation of authorship—detects bias and the reasons for it.
- Formulates a reasoned conclusion—public opinion was very much in favor of US involvement but that opinion had been shaped by the reports in the press and the speeches made by US politicians, many of whom were one-sided in their viewpoint; the sources reflect the many factors that eventually caused the US government to take action and become involved.

Level 5 (12–14 marks)
Balanced two-sided response supporting and rejecting the statement based on good source content, contextual knowledge and evaluation, with a supported overall judgment.

- More developed discussion of L4 content, knowledge and evaluation.
- Formulates a conclusion—the information given in the sources can be biased and therefore the overall view will be dependent upon which source have been viewed.

Level 4 (9–11 marks)
Two-sided response supporting and rejecting the statement based on source content with either contextual knowledge or evaluation.

- The sources offer a mixed set of viewpoints.
- Some of the sources confirm that public opinion was an important factor; many Cubans reside in the US and there is widespread sympathy for the Cuban cause (B); the press helped to make it an emotional debate about involvement, and the decision to get involved “to free Cuba” was very popular with the US public (G).
- Some sources suggest other factors played an important role in the decision to become involved; many Republican politicians were in favor of involvement and gave speeches in support (A) & (F); the press played an active role (E) and (C); economic and financial considerations to protect US interests (F).
- Many of the sources offer biased viewpoints such as (A) the view of Senator Redfield Proctor, former Secretary of War; (B) the view of Henry Cabot Lodge, who was a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Question 16

Study Source A.

What can you learn about the movie industry in the 1920s? Explain your answer using details from the source and your knowledge.

Level 4 (6 marks)

Answers that demonstrate a developed understanding of the source content/message, with good supporting contextual knowledge.

- By the late 1920s about 100 million Americans went to movie theaters each week; there were several showings of the movie each day.
- Prices were reasonable and consumers had more money to spend; people from all classes went to the movies.
- Advertising played an important role—huge billboard.
- Hollywood was the home to several movie companies—Warner Brothers was just one (Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer, Fox Film, United Artists).
- The “star system” made leading actors celebrities (Clara Bow, Rudolph Valentino).
- “The Jazz Singer” signaled a new age in the movies—the first talking picture—vitaphone.

Level 3 (4–5 marks)

Answers that develop the content/message of the source and demonstrate good understanding; may include some contextual knowledge.

- Movies were popular (shown twice daily) as they were a new fashionable form of entertainment; attracted vast audiences from all classes.
- Movie companies made movies designed to appeal, e.g. “The Jazz Singer” was popular because jazz music was popular.
- “The Jazz Singer” was shown in New York City and it was in the big cities that movies were most popular.
- Leading players were as important as the movie itself (Al Jolson in “The Jazz Singer”).

Level 2 (2–3 marks)

Answers that select/describe details from the source with some supported development.

- Movies were popular (shown twice daily); large crowd.
- Warner Brothers was one of many movie companies; they also owned movie theaters.
- The industry had moved from silent to sound movies (vitaphone).

Level 1 (1 mark)

Answers that offer a generalized comment with loose reference to the source.

- Movies were popular.
- Large numbers of people went to watch the latest movie to be released.

Question 18

Study Source C.

How useful is this source to a historian studying lifestyles in the 1920s? Explain your answer using details from the source and your knowledge.

Level 4 (7 marks)

Answers that consider the utility and limitations of the source by providing a reasoned and balanced evaluation in terms of its content and provenance.

- It is an artist’s impression—a mural that tends to glamorize city life.
- Useful as content picks out many key features of lifestyles in the city—sport, Jazz Age, dance culture, flappers, public transportation.
- The major omission is rural America—poverty of farming community; African Americans; racial tensions; Native Americans, etc.
- The mural is one of ten panels so need to see all ten to obtain the full picture.
- It is limited as it is an impression not an actual photograph that would give a more accurate and realistic view of lifestyle in the 1920s.

Level 3 (5–6 marks)

Answers that consider the utility and limitations of the source in terms of its content and provenance.

- The source shows many aspects of city life.
- Sport—popularity of baseball, basketball, etc.
- City life—subway, probably New York City, a boom city.
- Night life—dance halls, new dances, flapper culture.
- Women—flapper lifestyle, fashion, job opportunities.
- Religion—strength of the church in some areas.
- Only deals with city life—contains no reference to lifestyles across rural United States.
- Projects a narrow focus upon the lifestyles of Americans during the 1920s.
- Limitation—it is a mural that selects aspects of city life—glamorized view; one of a series of views forming a set.

Level 2 (2–4 marks)

Answers that consider the utility or limitations of the source in terms of its content and/or provenance.

- Sport was important (boxers in the ring).
- Public transportation was available in towns (trams and subway).
- Some women were independent (couple on bench, woman alone on subway).
- News was available (man reading paper).
- Night life (club scene).
- Religion was important (slogan, people praying, band playing).
- It is from a mural called “Entertainment”, which was painted in 1930–1931.

Level 1 (1 mark)

Answers that offer a generalized comment or paraphrase the source content.

- The picture shows lots of people doing different things.

19 Study Source D and E.

Why do these sources disagree about the extent to which women's lives changed in the 1920s? Explain your answer using details from the sources and your knowledge.

Level 5 (9–10 marks)
Answers which explain points of difference based on source content, provenance and good contextual knowledge.

- Both sources describe the lifestyle of women during the Jazz Age.
- The two accounts offer contrasting lifestyles between single independent women (D) and married women (E).
- Source D was written by a flapper, a woman who had money to enable her to live her life without having to work; she could afford the latest fashion; she wore trousers, make-up, and went out on her own; she drove and played sports; she enjoyed city life and attended the jazz clubs and performed the new dances; it stresses the independence of women.
- Source E was written by a feminist who describes the expectations upon a modern wife—the show window, good looks, dress well, ability to play bridge and dance; it says women do not need brains but looks.
- Both sources were written for different purposes. Source D was a letter to a newspaper to sell/celebrate the flapper lifestyle; Source E by a feminist journalist in a regular newspaper column on women's issues commenting that the changes were not beneficial for women.
- The sources highlight the changes in women's lives in the 1920s but from different perspectives—contrasting lifestyles of single and married women.

Level 4 (7–8 marks)
Answers explain points of difference based on source content and provenance with some contextual knowledge.

- Source D describes the lifestyle of a flapper living in New York City—fashionable clothes, driving, playing sport, had money so did not have to work; treated men as equals.
- Source E describes the lifestyle of a married woman who was expected to be a show piece for her husband; beauty not brains.
- Both sources were written by females; one in 1922 the other in 1923; both describe aspects of the lives of females; both were written for different purposes to justify their viewpoint.
- The sources show the contrasts of life for women in the 1920s; single versus married women.

Level 3 (5–6 marks)
Answers identify points of difference based on source content and provenance.

- Source D describes the lifestyle of a flapper living in New York City—fashionable clothes, driving, playing sport.
- Source E describes the lifestyle of married women and the way they were meant to act to support their husbands.
- Both sources were written by females; one in 1922 the other in 1923; both describe aspects of the lives of females; both were written for different purposes.
