Nawab Siraj-ud-Duala opposed the growing British power in Bengal in 1757. Robert Clive, commander of the British East India Company’s troops that had just retaken Calcutta from the Nawab, began to re-establish control of Bengal. Clive was heavily outnumbered by the Nawab’s forces, but persuaded Mir Jafar, the Nawab’s commander, to switch sides and not fight when the two armies met. The Nawab opened the battle with heavy gunfire which went on until it started to rain heavily. Clive’s troops covered their cannon and muskets to protect them from the rain, whilst the Nawab’s troops did not. When the rain cleared, Clive attacked. The Nawab’s troops retreated. 22 of Clive’s soldiers were killed and 500 of the Nawab’s soldiers were killed.
